These songs will improve your piano playing skills while you learn your favorite jazz songs, watch a few of the piano tutorial videos to help you out a bit. 1. Snow White – "Someday My Prince Will Come" You probably know this song from the Disney movie Snow White and the Seven Dwarves. But this song was reinvented in jazz form by many jazz musicians. You can easily take the vocal leads and convert them to the piano, such as what Chick Corea did. The striking feature of this song is the melody. But hearing the Disney version, you can tell the varying notes isn't an easy song to sing. Therefore, it's quite difficult to play on the piano. The lead melodies captivate anyone who hears this song. But unlike the Disney song, the jazz piano version gives this song more complexity. This makes this song fun but challenging. 2. Ella Fitzgerald – "All the Things You Are" If you're unsure where to start with jazz piano, always start with the classics. "All the Things You Are" is a perfect starting piece. Dating back to 1939, this song was played by Jerome Kern. This song is the epitome of classic jazz composition. Chord progressions and other dynamic changes make this song challenging. But everything flows so naturally, so it's complex yet beautiful. Most beginners find the intro difficult. But once you get past the challenging beginning, you get a better feel for the song. After you practice this song, the chord changes and other dynamics make more sense.
